"MON DIEU! I AM NO
CABARET DANCER," PAVLOVA CRIES

Mme. Anna Pavlova, the famous Russian ballerina, who was hissed by New York society people because she refused to dance at the "The Damsel" in the foyer of the Metropolitan Opera House. Mme. Pavlova, who had changed from her dance costume to a magnificent court dress and was present as a guest, indignantly resented the invitation to further entertain the fashionable four audience.

CALL MELLER, BYRNES, FITZ, IN 'UNDERGROUND'

Twenty-seven men "winners will be summoned when in mid-January the Public Service Commission resumes its probe of the New Haven 'underground' fund." It is announced. The work of completing annual and special reports will prevent earlier resumption of the hearing.

Among the witnesses to be called are Charles S. Miller, Timothy R. Byrnes, Mayor Fitzgerald, Representative Cleveland A. Chandler, ex-Representative H. Bert Keweenaw, H. H. Wilson, ex-Senator Charles H. Jones, J. Otto Vandewell, E. H. Robbins, Sylvester B. Baker, ex-Senator Thomas P. Curley, Herbert E. Ellis, Arthur P. Russell and Edward G. Biggs.

Mrs. Lynch Predicts Leehan's Acquittal
TOMES RIVER, N. J., Dec. 20.—Confident predictions that a verdict acquitting William J. Leeahan of the murder of Mrs. Caroline Turner would be returned before midnight were made by Mrs. Joseph Lynch, the rich society woman who is aiding the defendant, when the summing up in the trial began today.

"I will not be content with the acquittal of Leeahan," said Mrs. Lynch.
"I want to find the real murderer of Mrs. Turner. I expect to devote my money and my energy to running down the slayer of Mrs. Turner."

PAVLOVA EXPRESS

Hundreds of Christmas packages to Russia were destroyed or ruined last night in a coach of the second class of the special Christmas mail express train from New York today.
The coach was detached at New London. The loss will reach $10,000.
Express Messenger Charles Billings of Wilton, N. J., had to cling to a chest outside the coach. He was exhausted and nearly frozen when rescued. In side the coach a coffin, containing the late of David Lomax of New York, was recovered.

Billings was able to describe his experience as follows:
"I first noticed the fire just after we had left New Haven. It was in the west end of the car. I first attempted to reach the back, but the smoke drove me back. Then I pulled the safety cord in the car, but for some reason it did not work. The conductor's valve was in the corridor and the car, but with the express matter piled to the roof of the car and the fire gaining rapid headway, I saw that it would be useless to try and reach it.

"I opened the door of the car and leaped against the safety chain.
I closed the door and clung there between the chain and the door.
Soon I felt the biting cold of the wind at my back and as the fire traveled the car I found it difficult to maintain my hold of the door, owing to the heat. I was almost in despair when we pulled into this city, and I don't remember any more for a while."

"Why is it that entertainments for charity are always what you call bungled?" demanded Anna Pavlova, the Russian ballerina, today, when she arrived from New York with her company.

"I love charity. I give my time and my money and my art, and what do I get? I am blessed. It is not nice. Pavlova never hears the audience the goose make until she dances for charity.

"The public I do not blame, but the people that say I will do things that I do not know about, that are not good forms, they are to blame."
"I am not a cabaret dancer and I agree to attend the New Haven because they say the public will like to see me off the stage. Instead they all think to see Pavlova dance in the cafe-chantant. I am so pleased to see all the nice people and I bow and smile and have a good time."

"By and by a manager comes to me and says, 'Now you must dance.'
"I discover that I come as a guest and am expected to dance for my cup of tea. I depart at once and the foolish people hiss and hiss and hiss."

"The dignity and wonderful Russian was still in a state of nerves over her experience at the Metropolitan Opera House yesterday. The function was a charity, the matter and program. The Russian dancers were the feature."

Daniel Meyer who with Max Kabinsky was the star of the dance, explained:
"Of course she would not dance in a cafe-chantant, the very idea was preposterous, and she was not consulted about this feature of the program at all."

Small Doubtful for Mayor on City Ballot

There is considerable doubt whether City Councilor Ernest F. Smith will get on the majority election list.

At 1 o'clock the actual count showed 433 names on the list, and only 422 of the required number were fifty Smith nomination papers whose names were yet to be examined. But, in the opinion of officials in the Election Commissioners' office from a cursory examination of these fifty papers, Mr. Smith would not get enough names to qualify.

If Smith fails of the required number, it will not only eliminate him from the majority race, but, it will mean, in all probability, that his strength will be lost to Thomas J. Kenny, president of the City Council, and endorsed by the Citizens' Political League.

This politician says, will mean from 10,000 to 15,000 extra votes for Kenny.
The possibility that Smith may not qualify on the nominating papers came today as an unpleasant surprise to his supporters. Pleading on the basis of names rejected by the Election Commissioners, they found that Smith's margin of safety for 5,000 names was growing dangerously less.

Then began speculation of the result of Smith's possible elimination.

IGNORER THREAT. "As to the threat over the phone, I should like to see that man or any of those who are going to inflict injury to me. If a citizen could press certain charges against a public official without being threatened, the conditions, with a few exceptions are little different from those of another large city."

Patrolman Andrews, who arrested McKenna, and against whom the charges have been prepared, has been in the department a little over four years. He has always been on duty at Station 2 since his appointment.

He was given that route around Adams Square, because, according to Captain Sullivan, of his judgment in making arrests in his courteous manner.

In the trial before Judge Murray Andrews was the only government witness of several who had been sworn, including Lieutenant William Hyland. Andrews testified that he saw McKenna in Adams Square, surrounded by a crowd, that he was clapping his hands and that, when he got near him, he detected the odor of liquor.

He said that he told McKenna to go home and that he started for the car with his friends. After McKenna had entered the car Andrews testified that he boarded the car and arrested him.

Under cross-examination by Attorney Pratt, Andrews said that he could smell liquor on McKenna. When asked if he was brutal in any way, Andrews replied that he was not. McKENNA IN COURT FRODO'S

After a conference today Judge Morton in the United States District Court informed counsel that he would find Henry W. Morton of the New York and Maine banking houses of Morton & Company in contempt of court for failing to produce the checks of Mary A. Dolan of Brookline, the Black Bay moderate, who does business under the name of "Miss Dolan."

Mrs. Dolan is under indictment for alleged conspiracy in smuggling. The question of Morton's penalty will be argued next Friday morning before Judge Morton, who also has a decision as to penalty, a writ of error will be allowed. This will carry the case to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals.

There are two points in the case which have never been decided by a court of last resort, and the ultimate decision will be awaited by business all over the country.

Morton went before the grand jury, but refused to produce her checks on the ground that they were in control of the Dolan end of the concern and he was physically unable to get them.

The final decision will establish a legal precedent in the case of business producing customers' records, when the checks are out of the country.

Please Write an Editorial for the Sunday American

Here is the cartoon to go with your editorial. What must you say about it?

DRIVING DULL CARE AWAY—SHE COMES BACK

The principal thing in this world is TO DO YOUR OWN THINKING. Editors, preachers, teachers, are willing to do your thinking for you, and they make a living at it.

Their work is useful, but the real work is that thinking which you do for yourself.

In this column we print a very small picture which gives an idea of the all-purpose cartoon which will be published in the Sunday AMERICAN tomorrow. With this cartoon there will be the editorial of a professional writer.

Please sit down now, write your own editorial, very short, about this cartoon.

And tomorrow you will be able to see for yourself how much better you can do than the professional editorial writer of the Sunday AMERICAN.

We reproduce this cartoon in very small size by permission of the Sunday AMERICAN, and as it is an excellent picture for young people to use as a thought stimulant.

You see at a glance what it means. Careless, thoughtless youth drives away Dull Care with the bottle and empty laughter.

Later on, Old Care harnesses up those that drove her, and she becomes the driver.

Think about it; write what you think very briefly. Remember, Mue. de Serigne's famous wise saying, "If I had had more time I would have written you a shorter letter." Concentrated brief thought is the great thing.

THE PARTS OF THE MAN TAKEN BY THE REBELS

Trapped by one leg, which became caught in a hole hurried in the floor, night rider John Henry Adams today was snatched in a fire which did $2,000 damage to his home at No. 267 Farrington street, in the Wollaston district of Quincy, early today. The flames literally set their own course for the aged victim.

His sister, Mrs. Carrie T. Goucher, seventy-six years old, was painfully burned. She had managed to get to the front door and collapsed just as John Murphy, a neighbor, forced in the door and dragged the woman to safety.

The Torrey home was a two-story frame house, in which the man and his sister lived together. They slept on the second floor, with a coal stove in the room occupied by Mr. Torrey.

The firemen said that the fire was due to a live coal dropping out of the stove and igniting the flooring. A hole was burned through. When Mr. Torrey and his sister started to escape in the dense smoke the former happened to step right into this hole and was thrown to the floor.

Between the infirmity of age and the effects of the smoke he was unable to extricate himself and was found dead, with one leg down through the hole.

From his nearby home John Murphy saw smoke coming from the Torrey house. He ran to the fire alarm box and rang the bell. Mr. Torrey had made entrance and carried Mrs. Goucher to a neighbor's home.

Mr. Torrey was a Forty-Niner and a "Vigilante" in the old gold fever days in California. An old framed parchment, bearing the name and seal of the Vigilante, was found in Mr. Torrey's smoke-choked parlor.

UNITED CLERGY CALL FOR BIG OUTDOORING ON GO-TO-CHURCH DAY

Go-to-Church-day for Greater Boston has been generally endorsed by the clergy. The mass meeting to consider arrangements for its observance on Sunday, January 11, will be held at noon on Monday in Pilsbury Hall, No. 12 Devon street. Rev. Dr. George L. Coffey, pastor of the Pilsbury Congregational Church, Dorchester, will preside.

These subjects will then be presented for sermon subjects:

"Why does Boston need the churches?"

"What should the city do for the churches and ministers to help them in their work?"

"Is the church up to date?"

Other subjects may be presented at this meeting. No religious movement has ever taken such a hold upon Boston as this Go-to-Church Day. Ministers of all denominations have approved the plan, and have expressed their hearty endorsement. Others express their sentiments to-day.

REV. HERBERT S. JOHNSON, D. D., pastor of the Warren Avenue Baptist Church.

Let every one observe this Go-to-Church Day. Let every one who has never been to church before go to church then, and find out what the churches are doing.

You don't know what the churches are doing until you get close to them. I thoroughly believe in this day and will keep it to the letter.

REV. DR. DAVID M. LUCKROW, assistant pastor of Tremont Temple.

A Go-to-Church Day is a splendid idea. Some men have had an early religious training, but it is put away in moth balls. A movement of this sort would bring out many a man's religion and show him his real duty.

Let us all, for the sake of our godly parents, and for the sake of our Christian homes and native land, give one honest look at the things eternal and worship God one day at least.

REV. DR. DELTON BRONSON, district superintendent of the New England Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

Success to the Boston AMERICAN and its current campaign for a Go-to-Church Day! It is in harmony with our proposed Methodist Old Home Day, January 4. If we can get a few thousand indifferent men to recognize the source of all the benefits of Christian civilization, even for two Sundays, it will be well.

I have seen nearly every country in the planet, but I never saw a churchman lead where I would consent to live.

REV. DR. S. M. SAYFORD, of the New England Evangelical Alliance of Christian Churches.

The everybody-go-to-church Sunday is a good plan if it is kept working. Probably if church members put something like the special effort into recruiting attendance regularly more people would be brought under the influence of the gospel, and through it the community character would be much improved.

LADY DECIES, formerly Vivien Gould, and sixteen-month-old baby Eileen, who are in America for a Christmas visit to Lady Decies' parents.

NEW YORK, Dec. 20.—They are all getting ready at the home of the George Jay Goulds at No. 847 Fifth avenue to move out to Georgian Court at Lakewood for the holiday and most elaborate Christmas party that the court has ever known.

It is all to be in honor of the late Lady Decies (Vivien Gould) and more particularly in honor of Miss Eileen, her only child, who is now sixteen months old and who has been in America for a Christmas visit to her parents.

"Grandma," meaning Mrs. George Jay Gould, is monopolizing Eileen and is almost frantically happy at seeing her daughter again and in holding her in her arms the little granddaughter.

There is another granddaughter over in England, Katherine Mary, who is only three months old. Lady Decies thought it best not to subject her younger infant to the long journey.

This is going to be the happiest and best Christmas we ever had," says Mrs. Gould, "and I am sure it will be." She is going to try to get Eileen to let one of the children make her first journey. Surely she does not need both then. Eileen will be with her all the time.

Just here "Grandma's" scheme will work out when Lady Decies comes to the city. She will be with her all the time.

She will be with her all the time. She will be with her all the time. She will be with her all the time.

WHAT SOCIETY PEOPLE IN THE HUB ARE DOING

By ELIZABETH ELLIOTT.

That charming young matron, Mrs. James C. Barr, who with her husband recently deserted their country place at Beverly Farms and took apartments at the Copely-Flata for the winter, has just returned from a visit to New York, where they were at the Ritz-Carlton.

The Barrs are to go down to their Beverly Farms place, which they keep open throughout the winter for week-end parties, to spend the holidays and will have a delightful family reunion. Mrs. Barr's business interests are partly located in New York now, so Mrs. Barr will have to divide her time between her friends in the two cities from this on.

Naturally social interest centers in the wedding in the Church of the Holy Spirit, Matrimonial, of pretty Frances Salsomali and George van L. Meyer, Jr. The ceremony takes place at noon and is followed by a reception and breakfast at the Salsomali home nearby.

Agreeable Program at the Symphony

By FREDERICK JOHNS.

Rather an agreeable program for the usual run of symphony programs was the introduction of a concerto for piano and large symphony orchestra.

The concerto was written by Liszt when he was a young man in Paris, for an old French countess and her daughter, who played the piano and harp. It is very bright and cheerful, and it is very agreeable.

High Spots in the Busy Life of Mayor John F. Fitzgerald

Written for the Boston American

By Richard F. (Dick) Field

The retirement of Mayor John Fitzgerald from the mayoralty campaign has aroused such an interesting discussion concerning the Mayor's personality and activities that the story has spread throughout the country. In order that AMERICAN readers may know Mayor Fitzgerald more intimately this paper has asked Richard F. Field, a former secretary and lifelong companion to write the life story of the Mayor, whom thousands consider today to be the most picturesque character in Bay State life.

Mr. Field, through his personal contact with the Mayor during the past thirty years is able to tell in an entertaining and characteristic manner of the Mayor's activities. Fidelity to the wishes of members of his family, the Mayor has removed himself from the active field of politics and will take a long and much needed rest.

What he will do when he recovers his strength and what his plans for the future are, will be told by himself later.

THE AMERICAN today prints the first chapter of this story. Mr. Field, with characteristic modesty, refrains from telling all that he might of the Mayor, but he has given the essence of his friend, but given for the first time to the readers of New England an opportunity to see the personal side of Mayor Fitzgerald.

Mr. Field, in the role of narrator, portrays his hero as a boy. His early reminiscences are so tremendously interesting and describes the Mayor's early struggles, efforts and accomplishments.

By RICHARD F. FIELD.

CHAPTER I.

It is undoubtedly true that everybody in Boston and, in fact, the entire State has a personal interest in John F. Fitzgerald. He is a grip upon the people of this city that would be questioned and as years roll by that grip seems to strengthen.

Personally my admiration for the Mayor is due to my sincere and high regard for the man. I have known him to be a man who has been associated with him. During that time he has met, like all men, reverses, but his triumphs have been of such magnitude that we have practically forgotten the days when the black clouds hovered about him.

The story of Mayor Fitzgerald in one that sparks admiration because only a few men possess the highest of ideals and strength of character could have won the honors that have been bestowed upon him.

BOYHOOD OF THE MAYOR.

And during the many years that it took for him to reach his present place in Boston, John Fitzgerald has always remained the same, the embodiment of all that was manly, truthful and honorable. Essentially the Mayor is a Boston product. He was born a little more than fifty years ago in the North End of Boston, a section that is dear to the hearts of thousands of citizens. His early life in that neighborhood has undergone such a remarkable change during the past quarter-century was much the same as that of other boys of the community with the possible exception that he developed in early youth the quality for leadership that made him the most popular youngster in that community.

He was blessed with a good father and mother. They were sturdy Irish people and gave him the strength and nobility of character that in later years became such a marked characteristic. I first met the Mayor when he was president of the Vesperites. In those days it was the strongest social organization in the city. All of the young men of the North End section were members and when John became the president and will call him John, he extended its membership list. New quarters were secured and the club forged ahead to such an extent that it was the most moving spirit in the social life of the city. The Mayor's illustration of the Mayor's ability as an organizer and leader I shall tell the following story which will be remembered by many of his friends.

John hired Music Hall for a ball. The Boston Club had formerly held its ball affairs in Boylston Hall, which was to cost $500, many of the boys declared that it was the grandest and would end in disaster. John laughed at them and with characteristic vigor took care of all the arrangements.

ENTERTAINMENT.

Music Hall has the capacity of 2,000 persons and when the night of the ball came we were seated at the grand success of the event. The hall, which was tastefully decorated, was crowded and the club tested the Mayor's life story of the Mayor, whom thousands consider today to be the most picturesque character in Bay State life.

GIVE FOOD DOPEERS JAIL URGES CASSIDY

Mr. Cassidy shows you today why the food dopers continue their nefarious business of undermining the public health. He calls on the Federal administration at Washington to put heavier penalties on the dopers. The dopers are unclean, he says, and he argues as the only means of stopping them is their conviction.

By HARRY R. CASIDY.
The food dopers are still active. They persist in undermining the health of the people. They continue to adulterate, substitute and conceal the inferiority of their goods.

And why shouldn't they? What is to stop them? There's the Federal government. Yes, but what does that do?

It is supposed to have a police power over the dopers. But how does it exercise it?

Some one is found poisoning or cheapening food. The Department of Agriculture seizes some samples. Analysis shows them apt to contain anything but what they are labeled to contain. Some two years after the doper comes to trial. Either he pleads guilty or nolo contendere (practically the same thing) and is fined.

ONLY A FEW FINED.

Once in a great while the fine may amount to a few hundred dollars. I remember only a few. Remember, this all happens many months after the doped goods have been sold. Meanwhile this dishonest merchant or manufacturer has collected perhaps thousands of dollars selling this doped food. I am speaking now from experience—not hearsay.

Only the other day the government seized five barrels of apple vinegar at five dollars a barrel shipped by the Ohio Cider Vinegar Company of Cincinnati, O. It contained distilled vinegar. You can make distilled vinegar in four or five days. Pure cider, such as this stuff was labeled to be, takes many months to age.

This case has not yet come to trial. Meanwhile this firm might be foolishly enough to sell lots more of this stuff. You say they wouldn't take the risk?

How often you hear of a criminal who has spent years of his life in a jail being released for his old failures. I tell you the food doper is as greedy after his ill-gotten profits as the criminal after his stolen swag.

USED COAL TAR DYE.

One hundred and thirty-eight cases of macaroni shipped by the Atlantic Macaroni Company of Long Island City were seized at Newark. It was colored with a coal tar dye to conceal inferiority.

This means the doper used yellow coal tar dye to make the consumer believe eggs were used. You never saw green or blue macaroni, did you?

Then there were chestnuts. Let me warn you the market on nuts is glutted. There are nuts painted up with oxide or iron—the same stuff that's used in paint.

Which out that that doctored nut doesn't get to your children's mouths? There are lots of wormy nuts, but those you can see. The only harm done then is that you lose the money you paid for them.

Tomato pulp was seized from D. E. Poole & Company, Inc., one of the largest firms in Baltimore. The goods were filthy and decomposed.

A couple of years from now we may hear of just what devilish stuff this pulp was made. Meanwhile some insignificant fine will have been imposed.

In all fairness—let's be a regular farmer? Isn't it about time the government gave us protection which would act as real protection?

Gets $500 for Work Done 40 Years Ago

125-Almerman John Handrahan of No. 29 Common street, Waltham, has received an unexpected Christmas gift from the Federal government in a compensation stating that his claim for $500 overtime pay, for work done at the Watrous Arsenal forty years ago, has been allowed.

Ford Hall to Hear Zuehl.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 10.—What is claimed to be the world's record for strength tests was made by Michael Doreias, a Greek athlete who is a student at the University of Pennsylvania, when he registered a total of 1890 kilograms on the standard testing machines in the university gymnasium.

Dr. R. Tait Allcock, the university's physical director, who witnessed the test, declared that, in his opinion, Doreias is the strongest man in the world.

NEW RED BOX OFFICERS WILL BE ANNOUNCED TONIGHT
AFTER ANNUAL MEETING

RED SOX CHIEFS HOLD ANNUAL MEETING TONIGHT

The chiefs of the Boston Red Sox gathered in their annual convocation at the club's headquarters this morning. Officers for the coming year were elected but before the meeting was over it was known that J. J. Lannin, who recently acquired half ownership in the team, would be chosen president and John J. Taylor would succeed himself as vice-president.

The interest in the meeting was in appointing a new president. There have been several candidates named, but the election to be made could only be guessed at.

Eddie Moore, secretary to Mayor Fitzgerald, Hugh McGraw, Eddie Riley and others have been named as possible secretaries. Eddie Riley has many friends who would like to see him secretary.

High McGraw is the choice of the winter league. He is the first of the Red Sox royal royals and the man who, besides John J. Taylor, has been most prominently connected with the Boston American league club for the past decade. All over New England the sentiment seems to be that his election would be a wise appointment as the Red Sox administration could make.

A THRILLING STORY OF SOCIETY'S BLACKMAILERS

 Waterbury

The first bar Flagg had not found time to lock in his safe caught Holbrook there. He crossed to it quickly, picked up and tried in deft silence to open it, and then Dennell's voice startled him.

"How many times have I got to tell you to stand back there?"

The voice rang out in the grim stony room—some venturing soul for whom the room of violent death held a morbid charm skulked off in the night.

At the sound of the voice, Holbrook deed was done, and no assassin gone about armed with his bill file. The brogue deepened a bit, and Larry, sinking with a groan, told the friendliness of the chief named "right".

[illegible]

Larry approached his climax with easy grandeur. "Stabbed in front and not from behind, as an assassin, cowardly creature, would be sure to do, chief. There's nothing to it," he continued in a voice that seemed to be saying that his own chief was fully as clever as he and would see this, too, so that his words were hardly needed where the thing was so dead sure, so open to the eye. "Oh, there was Barney in that place—Barney—and hope for a coverin' in a minute."

"Nothing to it, chief—looks to me like outside."

Chief Dempster smiled quietly, and shook his head.

"Think so?" asked the treasurer.

"Look how he held it—to stab him."

"Oh!" Larry did not hesitate a second. In a cloud of wit on your watch the other man's eye and keep a firm grip on your rapier. "He probably changed his mind and decided to let it out," like the hero who decided to end it by drowning—and then remembered he could swim! "He pulled it in," said the rarer in his own time, "and somebody else drove it in."

"He might have fallen on it," ventured Larry.

"The life was yanked, struggle—see the flow?"

"Papers—only wind from the windows would be able to do that!"

"Look through the window would be able to do that!"

"The other way beyond the table. There the object at the table, and then off toward the window."

"Not quite," Larry said. "He would not get it," from Holbeck's little game not yet, as any rate. But would the chief of the United States Secret Service be duped by a lad who had once worn the jersey of the nation. And since he was willing to follow, he was willing to follow, willing to carry a message to the Garcia.

Holbrook never recognized a lost cause. Hope could not be far from him. To fight, to smile, to turn and fight again, to wrest victory from defeat—this was still to him the way of the hero of life. But was he fighting to protect womanhood from the legacy of shame of this dead blackmailer, this woman's father, or was Allan Graham, SIATYU, still the woman's loved?

"No," said the chief to a tone of certainty "the wind from the window would tell you that way."

"And the draft, hitting the wall, might tell them back," said Holbrook, brightly illustrating his point with another example.

The chief laughed—but his eyes were not. He questioned, and his lips were cold.

He stooped and picked up the rose Niel brook had held and found no time to conceal.

"Yes, this rose, captain—it was stepped on a dozen times in the struggle."

"One turn of the heel would grind it that much," returns our captain, airily,
"but I believe I might have done it by myself," retorted the chief with the pleasant assurance of a man who knows.

With that the athlete in him he'd round pretty lively! Nothing to it, chief —such thing!

"The devil shook his head. The party was over.

"Call that boy!" he commanded Donnell.

"Jargon!—come here!" shouted Donnell obediently.

"Yes, sir," quavered an answering voice.
